OFFICIAL RECORD

President Stroger assumed Chair as Presiding Officer.

INAUGURAL ADDRESS OF THE PRESIDENT
to the
BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS

December 4, 2006

Judge Evans, Mayor Daley, fellow elected county officials, members of the clergy, distinguished guests, and residents of Cook County. We are truly blessed to live in this great nation, in one of its most remarkable metropolitan areas, and today we are brought together by a shared goal and for me, a solemn oath to reshape our county government and to have the courage and resolve to make bold changes. At the end of each and every day, we must check ourselves in the mirror and ask: "are we taking the boldest of actions to restore people's faith in their government?"

As I begin, let me thank President Steele for her 20 years of service to the citizens of Cook County and let me thank my wife Jeanine, and our two children Hans and Claire, for all your support. I am humbled and honored today as I assume this important office. I am energized. I stand ready.

There will be difficulties ahead. We will transform this government into a more modern, more efficient operation. To get there, the transitions will be tough - the sacrifices painful. The dramatic change worth it.

The challenge of change brings a great opportunity. Opportunity to move our county government squarely into the 21st century, opportunity to change the old-time and often sluggish culture of this government, opportunity to improve lives, opportunity to earn the trust and confidence of those who pay for and receive county services.

In some respects, the bigger our challenges - and they are indeed massive - the bigger our shared opportunity.

Cook County has come a long way since its creation by the state in 1831, as the 54th county in Illinois with only 100 residents.

Today, Cook County is home to nearly 5.4 million people and consists of 133 municipalities, 29 townships, 236 special districts and 152 school districts.

As our county has grown, becoming increasingly diverse and complex, so too has its government. Today it stands as the 19th largest government in the United States.

We are home to the largest single-site jail in the nation, the largest unified court system in the world, the second largest public health system in the country, the first juvenile center in America, and a forest preserve district with its 68,000 acres of open space and two world-class institutions that is the envy of the nation.

Today, 175 years after its modest start, Cook County government faces all-too-familiar challenges.

We face increasing demand for services, most of which we are absolutely mandated by law to provide.

We face diminishing financial support from the federal government, especially in the Medicaid program, court-mandated staffing increases for our jail and the inflationary pressures of salary and health insurance hikes this for a government in which personnel costs account for more than 80 percent of all spending.

JOURNAL OF PROCEEDINGS FOR DECEMBER 4, 2006

All told, we now face a $500 million dollar budget deficit, the cumulative result of difficult decisions being too long deferred. Worse yet, we inherit a climate of public mistrust and a culture that too readily settles for "good enough" instead of demanding the best.

Today we begin to change all that. We must change the status quo.

Let me make this perfectly clear. As of today, there are no more sacred cows in Cook County government. I will look at every available option for restoring fiscal health to this government. I do not intend to balance this budget by raising taxes. All other options, however, are on the table.

Let me set some expectations.

Even though we have officially entered a new fiscal year, state law gives us until February 28th to adopt a budget.

We need every bit of that time. The task is too important to rush.

Only exact action can lay a new fiscal foundation that will serve our county government well in the coming years.

To the county commissioners who I will be working with every day, I look forward to rolling up my sleeves and working with you to attack the problems we face. I need your collective knowledge and talents. The people of Cook County need to see elected leaders working together to solve the problems we face. Together we will be a powerful force. We can affect great change, and have a lasting impact on our county. We must, however, do it together.

Let us hope that future generations will remember us as a group that successfully directed this ship through troubled waters together.

We must reduce excessive staffing, we must eliminate waste, we must restore faith in this government, we must and we will take bold steps.

Together, we will find efficiencies throughout all of county government including within the other elected offices that now account for 58 percent of our county workforce.

We will make wiser use of technology and modern business practices, and we will explore new and creative ways to provide governmental services.

We will do a better job collecting those funds already due the county, and we will look to balance our budget without new taxes.

Given the magnitude of our financial pressures, these are big challenges or, as I see them, big opportunities.

Beyond my immediate focus on the budget, I look forward to ensuring that the public trusts that its government is managed ethically.

To do that, I will require from each county employee the highest standards of integrity, efficiency and accountability and I will fulfill my pledge to appoint a truly Independent Inspector General.

Last week, as part of my commitment to enhance the public's trust in the integrity of our county hiring practices, I was proud to stand with President Steele and Michael Shakman, proud to support the county's execution of the Supplemental Relief Order in the Shakman case, proud to support the appointment of a Compliance Administrator for hiring.

Beyond budget and ethics, there are other opportunities ahead.

Cook County made history by creating the first juvenile court, and we will reclaim that history by ensuring that our juvenile detention center is the most professional operation possible, providing a meaningful intervention point for children in trouble.

Our public health system also needs our attention. We must modernize and professionalize its administration, and then ensure that our public hospitals and clinics use the taxpayer's money wisely in fulfilling their critical social mission.

Make no mistake I am here to bring real change.

But no matter how significant the change, my vision for this government will remain steadfast.

I envision a government that will always serve everyone regardless of income, race, ethnicity, gender, age or sexual orientation.

I envision a government that will ensure that quality health care is available to all, regardless of economic circumstances, and it will ensure that all women can exercise their reproductive freedoms.

I envision a government that will strive to keep us safe, and to safeguard the exercise of our civil liberties.

And I envision a government that will endeavor always to give even the least fortunate among us the opportunity to live the American dream.

There will be no shortage of critics as we undertake this journey of change.

This is a time for those brave enough to take bold action that reaches into the very corners of government, from the administrative offices to the emergency rooms, to the forest preserves, throughout the County and back up to the top. Anything less than action rooted in truth will be insufficient.

Fellow elected officials and fellow county residents let us together boldly embrace this unique opportunity in our lifetime. Let us work together to rid ourselves of yesterday's bad habits, and let us become a County government we can all be proud of when we look in that mirror.

I wish you and your families a safe and healthy holiday season. Now, let's roll up our sleeves and get started.
